

How to write amazing guest posts

How to write guest posts that get accepted

Want to ensure you write a guest post that gets published? Here's what you need to do: (but always follow their guidelines first, if available!)

1: Familiarize yourself with the blog

- What topics do they blog about?
- What is their writing style and tone? Use a similar style/tone in your guest post

3: It's all in the headline

An amazing headline can make all the difference – it's the first thing they'll notice, after your pitch. Take a look at their headlines and write yours in a similar tone of voice – and make sure it clearly tells the reader what your blog post is about

2: Write something unique

Have they covered this topic before? Then they might not take your blog! If you do write about the same topic, then make sure you cover a completely different angle

4: Write something that you'd publish

If you wouldn't publish this guest post on your blog, then why would they?

5: Think of your audience

Who are you targeting with this blog post? How is it helping them improve their lives, or help meet their needs

6: LINKING BACK TO YOUR SITE

Try to include your link as close to the top as possible (but not in the first couple of paragraphs)

Ensure your link is relevant if it's not, it might get removed and Google
wouldn't count
it either way

Add a link to the main page you want to promote, in your author bio (your homepage or even a blog post)

Don't use the exact anchor text as your link - Google knows you're trying too hard!
